

Prof. Dr. Elisabeth Naurath holds the Chair of Religious Education and Didactics at the Faculty of Philosophy and Social Sciences at the University of Augsburg (Germany). She studied Protestant Theology at the universities of Munich, Göttingen and Heidelberg. She completed her doctorate in Practical Theology with the topic 'Pastoral care as Body Care. Perspectives of a body-oriented hospital pastoral care' (summa cum laude). Her habilitation thesis dealt with the topic 'Compassion as a key to ethical education in religious education'. In 2008 she was ordained as a pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran confession.

Her chair has the profile of interreligious learning as peace education. This professional focus combines very well with her work for Religions for Peace. She founded a local Religions for Peace group as a women's group in Augsburg-Schwaben in order to strengthen the female voice of religions in interreligious cooperation. Since 2021 she was elected as Chair of Religions for Peace Germany and as a Member on the Board of Religions for Peace Europe.

Professor Naurath's current research focuses on the topic of 'Religions and the Climate Crises; Religions as actors for Climate Justice'. She is a Member of the Standing Commission on Nurturing a Sustainable Environment of Religions for peace International'. Since 11/ 2023 she is Project manager in the International Erasmus-Plus-Project (Cooperation Partnership) 'Facing Global Challenges. Climate Protection, Climate Resilience and Climate Justice in the Interreligious Education and Training of Teachers'
